Version 3

Julius Mombach
Arr. Stuart Izon

This is the second of four melodies Mombach composed for Psalm 24. Where the more familiar setting is a simple ternary form, this one is considerably more complex. It really demands a choir, which may explain why it's heard less often. Although all four melodies sit in the Festival section of Mombach's score, this setting is reserved by many for the High Holidays, so that the first melody can be used on Festivals.

The piece opens dramatically in the bass, with striking word-painting on "He founded it". Then comes a meandering motif over "upon the rivers," repeated four times, perhaps an allusion to the four rivers of Eden. A climbing melodic line accompanies "who may climb," and later a mighty dominant chord underscores "mighty in battle." At the S'u Sh'arim section the character switches and the tempo lifts. This is classic Mombach: the music pushes steadily on, until we reach the final "hakavod", pausing there on a secondary dominant, and building to a truly cathartic finish.
