

S'u Sh'arim

143a

Version 2

Samuel Naumbourg
Arr. Stuart Izon

On Festivals which fall on weekdays, we replace the paragraph of Havu Ladonai (Psalm 29) which we say on a regular Shabbat, with Ladonai Ha'aretz (Psalm 24). This paragraph is sung as we carry the Torah scrolls back to the ark, following the reading for the Festival.

Of all the many settings for this Psalm, Samuel Naumbourg's is probably the most well known. Like several of his works, it imitates the choral marches found in grand opera during the 19th century. The chazzan (or originally a solo soprano) sings a soaring melodic line while the choir provides an insistent march-like rhythm, popping out of the texture to add vocal fanfares. Near the end the tempo quickens to build to a dramatic coda and apotheosis over the words "He is the King of glory!". Though Naumbourg composed this for general Yom Tov, in many congregations its ecstatic drama is reserved for the High Holidays, leaving room for other tunes on Shalosh Regalim.
