

Adir Bimlucha

553a

Version 2

Trad.
Arr. Stuart Izon

Although it has no obvious connection to Pesach, it is traditional to sing Ki Lo Na'e at the end of the Seder. This custom developed some time in the 13th century, originally for the first night of Pesach only. Ki Lo Na'e first appears in Eitz Chaim, a halachic work by Jacob ben Judah of London, and some have ascribed its authorship to him. Indeed, Rabbi Sacks described it as the one potential British contribution to the Haggada. This is a well known traditional melody, of unknown authorship.
